

```

import java.util.Scanner;

public class PokemonTraining {
    public static void main(String[] args) { Scanner sc = new Scanner(System.in);
        System.out.print("Enter initial energy level: ");
        int energyLevel = sc.nextInt();
        if (energyLevel <= 50) {
            System.out.println("Initial energy level should be greater than 50.");
        }
        else{
            int trainingPoints = 0;

            System.out.println("Initial Energy Level: " + energyLevel); System.out.println("Initial Training Points: " + trainingPoints);

            for (int i = 1; energyLevel >= 50; i++) {
                if (energyLevel-5>=50){
                    trainingPoints += 10;
                    energyLevel -= 5;
                }
                else{
                    System.out.println("Pokemon is exhausted. Training terminated.");
                    break;
                }
                System.out.println("Training Session " + i + ". Training Points: " + trainingPoints + ", Energy Level: " + energyLevel);
            }
            sc.close();
        }
    }
}

```