

How to write an article review

Step 1: Read and annotate the article (in your booklet) that you will review. Step 2: Write a 4-paragraph review of the article. The four paragraphs may follow these guidelines:

Paragraph 1: Summary

You can write the summary of an article by (1) writing the central idea in one sentence and then (2) writing the main ideas in your language and in a coherent manner.

The purpose of this paragraph is to provide your readers the main ideas of the article. Assume that your readers have not read this original article; hence, in order to understand your review, they need to read this summary first.

Paragraph 2: Your agreement points with the writer of the article

In the second paragraph, mention one or two ideas of the writer that you agree with or can relate to. Give reasons for your agreement and add your personal examples or observations as evidence.

Paragraph 3: Add your opinion on the suggestions given in the article or suggest any other issues the writer could address

You can write the third paragraph in several ways.

For one, you can mention your opinion on the suggestions given in the article.

Or, you can mention and give examples of one or two ideas that this article could also include. Paragraph 4: Conclusion

In the final paragraph, mention what you have learned from this article and how reading this article is beneficial for the readers.
